OUTLOOK AND STRATEGY

Market Review. In January 2025, international fixed income investments performed well, with the Bloomberg Aggregate Bond Index (Global) up 0.93% and JP Morgan Asia Credit Index (JACI) up 0.22% year-to-date. This was due to lower yields from softer-than-expected US inflation and comments from the Federal Reserve (Fed) official about possible rate cuts. However, mixed messages from other Fed officials, including Fed Chair Jerome Powell, who saw no rush for rate cuts, tempered gains. The US economy grew slower than expected in the last quarter of 2024, but consumer spending remained strong. Inflation rose slightly, driven by higher energy costs, but core inflation showed signs of cooling. The Fed kept its interest rates steady, with the Chair emphasizing the need to monitor economic data before making further changes.

The Eurozone reported a GDP figure of 1.1% for the 4th Quarter which was slightly better than the 1.0% from the previous quarter. This brings the full-year 2024 average GDP figure to 0.875%, better than the previous year's average of 0.525%. In spite of the better economic growth figures, the market expects the European Central Bank to still cut their policy rates again with the objective of supporting the Eurozone give the recent uncertainties with the Russia-Ukraine conflict. The ECB meets again this week on Thursday, March 6, 2025.

Fund Performance. The Fund returned 0.09% for the month, underperforming its benchmark by 15 basis points. Year-to-date, return amounted to 0.09%, underperforming its benchmark by 15 basis points.

Fund Strategy. The fund will maintain its current duration. Investors in the bond fund must be prepared to withstand short-term volatility as higher investment value is normally achieved over the medium- to long-term.
