OUTLOOK AND STRATEGY

Market Review. Key contributors to portfolio income this month were covered calls, high yield bonds, and EM debt. US equity positions, currency management positions, and global ex-US equities were the largest contributors to total return this month, offset by negative price returns in covered calls, investment grade bonds, and infrastructure equities which detracted from performance. We continued to take profits across lower yielding bond markets with limited upside potential, such as CLOs and preferred stocks. Short-term we're comfortable holding modestly higher levels of cash, partially as a risk hedge but also opportunistically should more attractive entry points develop. Risk assets generally ended higher but sold off at the end of the month for the second time in a row. Unlike earlier in the year, the cause this time around was a spike in interest rates driven by higher real rates as opposed to rising inflation expectations. While the absolute level of interest rates remains historically low, the speed of the move unnerved investors and called into question the lower for longer environment that has underpinned the market recovery. Consequently, growth stocks, which have been some of the biggest beneficiaries of low rates, came under increased pressure whereas income-oriented asset classes like high yield and dividend stocks held in much better. We think rates can drift higher in the coming months fueled by an acceleration in vaccine-led reopening activity and higher inflation. However, the robust growth backdrop remains supportive of risk assets. And even though investors have pulled forward rate hike expectations, we expect the Fed to reiterate their dovish stance and remind investors policy remains incredibly accommodative. Additionally, we're likely to see some technical resistance as rates move higher given investors remain hungry for high quality, higher yielding paper. We saw evidence of this on the last day of the month as yields retreated from their highs. The Fund fared well amidst the rate increase, as our duration remains near the all-time low. For now, we are maintaining this position but may look to add duration should rates continue to grind higher. At higher yields, duration can serve as an important ballast in a diversified portfolio.

Fund Performance. The Fund returned 0.00% for the month and year-to-date return amounted to 0.00%.

Fund Strategy. We are selectively taking profits in areas with lower yields and less upside potential. We continue to see opportunities in dividend stocks and areas of higher yielding credit fixed income and are putting cash to work. That said, the fund's positioning did not change meaningfully over the month and we maintain our moderately pro-risk stance.

²Returns are net of fees & dividends.

³Since Inception.

⁴Measures the degree to which the Fund fluctuates vis-à-vis its average return over a period of time.

⁵Used to characterize how well the return of a Fund compensates the investor for the level of risk taken. The higher the number, the better.

⁶Measures reward-to-risk efficiency of the portfolio relative to the benchmark. The higher the number, the higher the reward per unit of risk.

⁷Income paid over the last 12 months divided by the NAVPU of the latest record date

⁸Includes time deposits, other receivables (accrued income, investment securities purchased, accrued expenses, etc.) Net of Liabilities
