OUTLOOK AND STRATEGY

Market Review. Global equities declined in September as investors adopted a risk-off sentiment over concerns on the path of economic recovery. Sentiment was driven by the Federal Reserve's hawkish shift, inflation concerns, and the energy crisis across Europe and other markets. Investor confidence likewise declined due to fears of contagion as Chinese property giant Evergrande missed interest payments and as Chinese government regulators continued their crackdown on the technology sector. The Federal Reserve kept rates steady and continued the current pace of asset purchases. Fed Chairman Jerome Powell said that it is closer to achieving its inflation and employment goals and announced that the pace of asset purchases could taper starting November until mid-2022 as long as the recovery remains on track. Regarding fiscal policy, the US Congress continues to debate over the size of the 2022 budget reconciliation bill, holding back the raising of the debt ceiling. Treasury Secretary Janet Yellen called for a raise or a suspension of the US debt ceiling, warning that the US Treasury could run out of cash by October 18 and default on its obligations if the debt limit isn't raised. In commodity markets, Europe and China are facing an energy crisis as prices surged due to a shortage in the energy supply. The supply crunch is expected to remain as demand growth strengthens and the cold season starts. Global supply chains remain under pressure, with factories in Europe and China forcing to limit production to conserve energy.

Fund performance: The fund returned -4.50% in September, outperforming the benchmark by 74 basis points.

Fund Strategy. We expect the human and economic impact of COVID-19 to remain challenging but are optimistic with the rollout of effective vaccines underway. In geographies where the vaccination rate is lower, localized outbreaks driven by the emerging Delta variant remain a source of concern for the public health system as well as the progress for reopening the economy. Beyond vaccine development, the COVID pandemic highlighted the need for more significant testing infrastructure in developed and emerging markets, which should continue to drive demand within the diagnostics industry. Medical device trends and hospital utilization are improving and we expect the gradual recovery to continue as many medical procedures cannot be deferred indefinitely, and vaccine availability should continue to restore patient confidence in accessing the health care system. The fund will continue to favor companies that develop innovative products designed to address important unmet medical needs. Over the long term, the tailwinds of innovation, an aging population and the globalization of demand cutting-edge Western-style medicines should continue to drive growth for the sector.
