OUTLOOK AND STRATEGY

Market Review. Global equities rose in March. Markets continued to advance amid the accelerating global rollout of vaccines, a favorable outlook for global economic growth, and substantial liquidity support from governments and central banks. Despite a broadening rollout of vaccines, global coronavirus trends remained volatile, with Europe experiencing a sharp rise in COVID-19 infections, extended lockdowns, and a slow vaccine rollout. In contrast, vaccinations in the UK accelerated sharply, and US President Joe Biden announced the country is on track to have enough vaccines for every adult in America by the end of May. The US Federal Reserve maintained its dovish policy stance, signaling that interest rates are expected to remain unchanged through 2023 despite upgrades to its economic outlook. Within fixed income, global sovereign yields diverged where US yields rose significantly relative to other major markets. High yield generated positive total returns holding up better than most fixed income sectors amid rising sovereign yields and the Fed's commitment to maintain an accommodative policy.

Fund Performance. The fund gained by 1.32% in March. Positive performance in March was due to strong gains from global equities but was partly offset by losses from global fixed income. Within global equities, from a regional perspective, the United States was the largest contributor to returns, supported by the accelerating vaccine rollout, massive fiscal stimulus, and ultra-easy monetary policy. Within global fixed income, investment grade credit was the largest detractor, generating negative total returns with spreads remaining flat while Treasury yields continued their recent upward momentum driven by an accelerating pace of vaccinations, an expected drop in COVID-19 infections into the summer, and stronger growth expectations as a result of continued fiscal and monetary support.

Fund Strategy. Encouraging vaccine progress, policy support, and gradually reopening economies make us confident in taking a pro-risk stance over a 12-month time frame. We think rising demand, higher commodity prices, low inventories, and wage pressures, among other factors, could push up inflation and inflation expectations sooner than the market expects. We are moderately bullish on global equities. We think a vaccine-driven reopening will be the catalyst for a continued rotation from growth- to value-oriented exposures. Given large output gaps and low levels of valuations, sentiment, and positioning in these areas, we think a rotation into EM and Asia will be an enduring theme for the rest of the year and we are leaning the portfolio towards these markets. On fixed income, low yield levels, steady state monetary policy and bigger fiscal stimulus continue to point towards a challenging year. We are moderately bearish on government bonds and have a modestly positive view on IG corporate spreads. Our view on EM debt has improved and we see a better developed market backdrop and extraordinary policy supporting EM assets. Finally, we believe this market environment to be supportive of security selection and active management. Against this backdrop, income investors will be best served through a highly diversified portfolio of multi-asset income producing assets that can be dynamically adjusted as market conditions evolve.
