OUTLOOK AND STRATEGY

Market Review. Global equity markets remained volatile in March as geopolitical tensions, inflation uncertainty, and surging commodity prices continued to dominate headlines. Global equities extended their decline at the start of the month as geopolitical tensions between Russia and Ukraine escalated but rebounded as the Federal Reserve raised interest rates. During his speech, Fed Chair Jerome Powell stressed that the strength of the economy can handle a more aggressive rate hike trajectory. Towards the end of the month, markets rallied due to improving sentiment driven by optimism on the progress of peace talks between Russia and Ukraine.

Economic data remained strong but inflationary pressures remained elevated, with some economies experiencing their highest inflation in years. US and Eurozone PMIs still signaled a strong expansion in business activity while US consumer confidence improved given the robust job growth in March. Meanwhile, China faced a resurgence in coronavirus cases, its largest since the start of the pandemic. The stringent lockdown measures weighed on manufacturing and business activity. However, the government pledged to support the financial markets and provide a boost in economic growth.

Commodity markets extended their rally with various raw materials reaching all-time highs as the conflict in Ukraine and sanctions on Russia continued to drive prices higher. Crude prices reached their 14-year high while European gas surged as much as 60% due to sanctions on Russian supply. Soaring wheat, metals, and grain prices drove food inflation higher due to Russia and Ukraine accounting for a significant share of the global supply.

Fund Performance. The fund returned 1.47%, lagging the benchmark by 105 basis points. Allocation in emerging market equities and underweight in energy stocks detracted from performance.

Fund Strategy. Due to the recent geopolitical events, we expect bouts of volatility to persist and prefer to be in higher quality and larger capitalization stocks. In terms of regional allocation, the fund is overweight in Asia/EM ex-Russia and Europe, underweight Japan and the US but we intend to reduce our Europe equity exposure due to expected negative impact of higher energy prices to the region. Our sector exposure remains balanced across but the fund is underweight Energy and Materials. In the longer term, we like stocks with sustainable characteristics as the world transitions towards net zero carbon emission targets.
