OUTLOOK AND STRATEGY

Market Review. Global equity markets sold off in September, driven by elevated inflation, a rising interest rate environment, and mounting risks of a global slowdown. Inflation prints remained high, with US and EU CPI posting at 8.3% and 9.1% year-on-year in August, respectively. Global central banks maintained their aggressive monetary policy tightening to curb the persistently high inflation. The US Federal Reserve and European Central Bank raised their policy rates by 75 basis points in September. Markets are also pricing in more rate hikes in the future as core inflation continues to post above targets. Growth stocks led the laggards due to expectations of a sustained tightening monetary policy, keeping the pressure on global equity markets.

Economic data indicators were mixed over the month. US business activity improved but stayed in the contraction territory supported by new orders in the manufacturing sector and improvement in the services sector. The US labor market remained tight as nonfarm payrolls increased by 263,000, and the unemployment rate declined to 3.5% for the month. Eurozone's factory activity declined in September as elevated input and energy prices weighed on production. China's manufacturing sector showed improvement and returned to expansion. However, the economy continued to be under pressure due to renewed lockdowns and escalating concerns in the property sector.

Fund Performance. The fund returned -8.67%, outperforming the benchmark by 80 basis points. Stock selection and cash allocation helped performance.

Fund Strategy. We continue to remain cautious in global equities due to inflation concerns and fears of a global growth slowdown. Against this backdrop, we expect volatility to persist and prefer to be in higher quality and larger capitalization stocks. In terms of regional allocation, the fund is overweight in Asia/EM ex-Russia and Europe, underweight Japan and the US but we have been reducing our Europe equity exposure due to the expected negative impact of higher energy prices to the region and political uncertainty. In addition, further escalation of the Russia-Ukraine conflict prompt us to be more cautious. Our sector exposure remains balanced across but the fund is underweight Energy and Materials. We expect a pull-back in commodity prices due to expectations of a slowdown in global growth. In the long term, we like stocks with sustainable characteristics as the world transitions towards net zero carbon emission targets.
