OUTLOOK AND STRATEGY

Market Review. Global equities declined in December. Market sentiment was dented by anxiety about tighter central bank policies amid weakening global economic growth and cautious corporate commentary that added to signs of recession. By contrast, investors were encouraged by milder inflation, which provided greater scope for some major central banks to slow their pace of interest rate hikes. Improving US inflation data combined with growing recession concerns and hawkish rhetoric by major central banks set the tone for a sharp spike in sovereign yields. Most fixed income sectors outperformed government bonds as spreads tightened. Global credit bonds outperformed duration-equivalent government bonds as spreads tightened. Within emerging markets, local markets debt outperformed external debt, in US-dollar terms.

Fund Performance. The fund rose by 0.01% in December. Active asset allocation strategy on regional equity and duration views helped performance.

Fund Strategy. Looking ahead, we are optimistic about the return potential for equity markets in 2023. Tactically, we are still modestly underweight equity but may look to go overweight when we see signs that markets are bottoming. On a relative basis, we are more constructive on high quality fixed income which looks more competitive from a yield perspective and could offer upside and diversification as growth slows. In our base case for 2023, we expect inflation to decline but remain above target in 2023, allowing central banks to stop tightening but not to cut rates. We expect further deterioration in macro variables to weigh on earnings expectations and will need to see the earnings downgrade process play out before we turn more favourable on global equities. While there is a decent likelihood of a recession, we expect it to be shallow. Within equities, we continue to focus on quality, preferring companies with pricing power, long-term margin stability and healthy balance sheets that can withstand inflationary pressures. Within fixed income, the Fed is leading the way on the inflation fight while the ECB has relatively more work to do. With US growth slowing, we think 10-year yields look relatively attractive and believe high-quality fixed income will resume its diversifying role. Finally, we believe this market environment to be supportive of security selection and active management. Against this backdrop, income investors will be best served through a highly diversified portfolio of multi-asset income producing assets that can be dynamically adjusted as market conditions evolve.
