OUTLOOK AND STRATEGY

Market Review. Global equities declined over the month as volatility remained elevated amid rising geopolitical tensions, accelerating inflation, and tighter monetary policy, offset by generally improving COVID-19 trends. Russia invaded Ukraine, initiating attacks on multiple cities, including the capital, Kyiv, in a move Russian President Vladimir Putin labelled a “special military operation”, aiming for the “demilitarisation and denazification” of Ukraine. In response, US and NATO allies imposed severe economic sanctions on Russia, largely cutting off the Russian economy from global financial markets and limiting the ability of the Russian central bank to take counteractive measures. Prices for natural gas and select grains and metals surged, and Brent crude oil prices topped US$100 per barrel amid expectations that sanctions would cripple energy exports and restrict the supplies of key commodities. These dynamics drove inflation expectations even higher, further complicating the efforts by global central banks to counteract surging inflation. COVID-19 cases dropped across most regions. Most global sovereign yields rose, driven by prospects of more aggressive central bank tightening amid higher inflation, although geopolitical concerns drove a partial reversal in select G10 yields at the end of the month. Most fixed income sectors underperformed amid broad credit spread widening, along with sovereign yield increases spurred by major central banks’ tightening stance.

Fund Performance. The fund declined by 1.82% in February. Within global equities, from a regional perspective, negative performance was led by the United States as Russia’s large-scale military attack on Ukraine and expectations of a more aggressive monetary policy tightening drove the S&P 500 index into correction territory. Within global fixed income, performance was negative across the credit sectors, led by losses from investment-grade, high-yield and emerging-market credit as spreads widened on top of rising yields.

Fund Strategy. In the near-term, we remain fairly cautious and maintain our equity risk management hedges, taking into account the risks of the ongoing Russia/ Ukraine conflict. We expect a risk premium in global equity and credit markets for elevated geopolitical uncertainty, and even more so in Europe and emerging markets. However, given the repricing that we have already seen and the likelihood of less hawkish developed market central banks, we expect global equities to still outperform global bonds over a 12-month horizon. On a regional basis, we prefer developed over emerging markets (EM) given China’s slowdown and the hardships EM countries face post-pandemic, including slower growth, high inflation, worse fiscal deficits, and greater political volatility. Within fixed income, we are moderately bearish on government bonds as well as credit, as we think credit valuations are rich and most spreads may continue to be challenged. Finally, we believe this market environment to be supportive of security selection and active management. Against this back-drop, income investors will be best served through a highly diversified portfolio of multi-asset income producing assets that can be dynamically adjusted as market conditions evolve.
