OUTLOOK AND STRATEGY

Market Review. Global equities rebounded during the month. Despite ongoing fears about persistently high inflation and rising interest rates, investors were encouraged by mostly resilient corporate earnings and moderating inflation expectations amid a sharp decline in commodity prices and slowing economic growth. The US Federal Reserve (Fed) hiked its target interest rate by 75 basis points (bps) for the second straight meeting in an effort to rein in decades-high inflation. Investors have been concerned that rising rates would tip the US economy into recession, but so far, the economy has performed better than most expected. The European Central Bank (ECB) ended its negative interest-rate policy with a larger-than-expected 50 bps hike to combat inflation. China's fragile economic recovery was strained by troubles in the housing market and supply-chain disruptions from the country's zero-COVID policy and persistent virus outbreaks. Most global sovereign yields declined on recession fears, even as major central banks continued to front-load their rate-hiking cycles.

Fund Performance. The fund rose by 2.65% in July. Within global equities, from a region perspective, gains were mainly driven by US and Europe equities due to better-than-expected corporate earnings and a decline in medium- and longer-term inflation expectations. Within global fixed income, positive performance was driven by investment grade credit exposures as yields fell and spreads tightened.

Fund Strategy. Going into the second half of 2022, our outlook on global equities have dampened as the probability of a recession has been steadily increasing which is exacerbated by central banks and policy makers tightening financial conditions in a slowing economy. Given higher interest rates, slower earnings and recessionary pressures, we prefer a moderate underweight to global equities. On a regional basis, we remain constructive on Japan as its fiscal stimulus provide tailwinds for its economy, and neutral on US as we see increasing risk of corporate earnings coming under pressure. On the other hand, we continue to have a bearish view on Europe and Emerging Markets on the back of growth and inflation concerns. Within fixed income, we continue to be neutral on rates and investment grade credit, given that rates rose sharply and may be extended as concerns on the economy grow. We remain bearish on credit as we think high yield credit valuations are rich and spreads may continue to be challenged. That said, defaults are likely to stay very low and technicals are strong as foreign demand for yield persists. Finally, we believe this market environment to be supportive of security selection and active management. Against this back-drop, income investors will be best served through a highly diversified portfolio of multi-asset income producing assets that can be dynamically adjusted as market conditions evolve.
