OUTLOOK AND STRATEGY

Market Review. Global equity markets gained in October as investors focused on better-than-expected earnings results. Robust labor data and elevated inflation prints supported central banks' continued hawkish stance. The US labor market remained strong as nonfarm payrolls increased by 261,000, beating expectations, while US CPI posted 8.2% year-on-year growth for September. Despite the strong labor data, signs of weakness are beginning to emerge in housing and business activity data, driving optimism that central banks might soon slow down their aggressive rate hikes. US business activity contracted for the fourth straight month in October and US composite PMI declined to 47.3 from 49.5 last month, driven by weaker manufacturing and services sectors. In other parts of the world, Eurozone's factory activity weakened further over the month, the most since May 2020 as record inflation and elevated energy prices weighed on demand. Meanwhile, in China, sentiment deteriorated as President Xi got re-elected for a third term, raising concerns about his authority and China's continued COVID-Zero policy.

The technology sector outperformed global equity markets as the MSCI ACWI Information Technology Index returned +7.0% in USD. Sentiment in the sector improved due to expectations of slowing monetary policy tightening. Within technology, all sub-sectors generated a positive return, led by hardware and services as investors rotated their portfolios to areas that stand to benefit in a late cycle environment.

Fund Performance. The fund decreased by -0.50% in October, lagging its benchmark by 844 basis points. Security selection in hardware and semiconductors sub-sectors detracted from performance.

Fund Strategy. We view the current market environment as favoring quality and value, driven by expectations of higher interest rates, higher inflation, slowing economic growth, and geopolitical instability. The fund increased its exposure to stable and quality stocks, adding more defensive characteristics to the portfolio in the midst of a broader volatile market. The recent concerns over rising interest rates and higher inflation have put pressure on technology stocks but the companies within the portfolio continue to be underpinned by compelling fundamentals and powerful, long-term secular growth drivers. The secular growth trends driving technology are multi-year transformations that are expected to persist, regardless of the macroeconomic environment or geopolitical risk. The fund will continue to focus on these long-term secular themes such as artificial intelligence, cloud computing, electric vehicles, metaverse and quantum computing.
