Liquidity Risk: Investors are exposed to the risk of loss due to the target fund's inability to convert security holdings to cash immediately or in instances where conversion to cash is possible but at a highly disadvantageous price due to limited participants in the market, low trading volumes, market disruptions, among others.

Country Risk: Investors are exposed to the risk of loss arising from negative developments in the political, economic and social conditions of the focus countries of the underlying securities of the target fund, which may adversely affect the value of the feeder fund.

OUTLOOK AND STRATEGY

Market Review. Global equity markets declined in February as persistently elevated inflation, hawkish rhetoric from global central banks and escalating geopolitical tensions tempered investor optimism. US headline inflation was 6.4% in January, higher than the consensus estimate of 6.2%. Economic data remained resilient with US nonfarm payrolls beating expectations and business activity moving back to expansionary territory. The US Federal Reserve maintained their aggressive monetary policy and raised interest rates by 25 basis points. Markets are pricing in further rate hikes due to sticky inflation and robust labor market, providing support to the central bank's stance of a "higher for longer" interest rate environment. Sentiment further weakened as geopolitical tensions between US and China rose due to an incident with a surveillance balloon. Emerging market equities underperformed the broader global equity market as profit-taking from recent strength and re-escalation of US-China tensions countered the continued positive sentiment from China's reopening. MSCI World Health Care Index returned -4.08% for the month. Within the sector, biopharma large cap and medical technology were the top performing sub-sectors.

Fund Performance. The fund decreased by -4.55% in February, lagging its benchmark by 47 basis points. Sector allocation within health care services and medical technology detracted from performance.

Fund Strategy. Supportive valuations, robust innovation pipeline and business models that are positioned to show resilience through the cycle leaves us with a positive outlook for the health care sector as we enter 2023. Within the biopharma industry, the fundamental backdrop, resilient earnings and breakthrough innovations, particularly in disease areas and oncology, are expected to become tailwinds in a potential recessionary environment. Outside of biopharma, medical technology companies have numerous opportunities as more attractive medical device categories are poised to accelerate compared to a decade ago, such as new diabetes devices, mitral valve therapies and genetic sequencing. In the medium-term, many firms are expected to grow their addressable market through geographic expansion, new technologies, and new patient populations. The fund will continue to favor companies that develop innovative products designed to address important unmet medical needs. Over the long term, the tailwinds of innovation and an aging population should continue to drive growth for the sector.
