OUTLOOK AND STRATEGY

Market Review. Global equity markets modestly rose in April amid expectations of a moderation in monetary policy of global central banks. Markets gained despite the failure of another US regional bank as investors focused on better-than-expected corporate earnings and improving inflation data. Corporate earnings in the first quarter of the year beat estimates driven by the strength in consumer sector. US inflation remained above target but was softer-than-expected at 5% year-on-year in March. Emerging markets underperformed broader global equity indices driven by a sell-off in Chinese equities amid mixed signals of economic growth and escalating geopolitical tensions.

MSCI World Health Care Index returned 3.5% for the month. Within the index, all of the sectors rose over the month. Biopharma large cap and health care services were the top performing sectors, while biopharma mid cap and medical technology were the bottom performing sectors over the period.

Fund Performance. The fund returned 3.85% in April, above the benchmark by 35 basis points.

Fund Strategy. Supportive valuations, robust innovation pipeline and business models that are positioned to show resilience through the cycle should benefit the sector over the long-term. Within the biopharma industry, the fundamental backdrop, resilient earnings and breakthrough innovations, particularly in disease areas and oncology, are expected to become tailwinds in a potential recessionary environment. Outside of biopharma, medical technology companies have numerous opportunities due to advancements in technology development, engineering capabilities, and integrated informatics. In the medium-term, many firms are expected to grow their addressable market through geographic expansion, new technologies, and new patient populations. The fund will continue to favor companies that develop innovative products designed to address important unmet medical needs. Over the long term, the tailwinds of innovation and an aging population should continue to drive growth for the sector.
