OUTLOOK AND STRATEGY

Market Review. Global markets rebounded in November. The US Federal Reserve kept rates steady for the second consecutive month, driving expectations that the central bank is nearing its peak level for this rate hiking cycle. November delivered mixed economic data for the US. The labor market remained resilient but showed signs of softening, with October unemployment rate rising from 3.8% to 3.9% and nonfarm payrolls posting below expectations at 150,000 jobs added versus the expected 180,000. US inflation also continued its moderation with the October year-on-year CPI at 3.2%. Investor sentiment improved over the past month as yields moved lower driven by peak interest rate expectations amid the declining inflation trend and softening economic data. The shift in sentiment provided support to risk assets and drove global equity markets its highest return since mid-2022. MSCI All Country World returned 9.28% for the month, with developed markets outperforming emerging markets. Similarly, global fixed income markets also returned positive for the month. US Treasury curve shifted downwards, and riskier fixed income assets outperformed comparable government bonds as spreads narrowed across sectors.

Fund Performance. The fund gained by 5.10% in November. Within global equities, from a regional perspective, positive returns were largely driven by the US as the rally was accompanied by dramatically easing financial conditions, with longer-dated US Treasury yields falling sharply from their October peaks after moderating economic activity, receding inflation and a softening labor market. Within global fixed income, investment grade credit and high-yield credit added to returns on the back of falling yields and tightening spreads as moderating inflation and weaker global macroeconomic data reinforced expectations that policy rates have peaked.

Fund Strategy. Looking ahead, we maintain a slightly cautious stance and prefer defensive fixed income over equities. Global economic resilience is waning due to restrictive monetary policy, leading to weaker growth and pressuring earnings which pose risks for equity markets. That said, we have been reducing our underweight to equities as we believe it will be more of a slowdown rather than a hard landing in the global economy in 2024. We remain modestly overweight to global bonds due to softer growth forecasts. Within equities, we continue to focus on quality, preferring companies that can withstand ongoing inflationary and balance-sheet pressures. Within fixed income, we have an improved outlook on investment grade credit which we believe will be better positioned to weather economic troubles and maintain a neutral stance. Finally, we believe this market environment to be supportive of security selection and active management. Against this backdrop, income investors will be best served through a highly diversified portfolio of multi-asset income producing assets that can be dynamically adjusted as market conditions evolve.
