OUTLOOK AND STRATEGY

Market Review. Global equities experienced a slight decline in February 2025, with the MSCI World Index down by 0.72%. The month was marked by profit-taking in large-cap US technology stocks and a shift towards value stocks amid economic uncertainties.

US equities struggled due to concerns over stretched valuations in mega-cap tech stocks and signs of weakening consumer demand. Retail sales declined by 0.8%, and consumer confidence softened, reinforcing investor caution. The US Federal Reserve maintained its focus on promoting maximum employment and stable prices. US inflation moderated but remained slightly above the 2% target, prompting the Fed to re-emphasize its commitment to using all available tools to support economic stability. Meanwhile, European equities outperformed as UK stocks reached record highs. Optimism was driven by the likelihood of a ceasefire in Ukraine and strong earnings in the defense and financial sectors. In Asia, Japanese equities showed resilience amid a mix of macroeconomic and geopolitical factors. The Tokyo Stock Price Index (TOPIX) saw a modest gain, driven by strong performances in the technology and consumer sectors. The Bank of Japan's decision to raise its unsecured overnight call rate to 0.5%, the highest in 17 years, was a significant move towards monetary policy normalization. This rate hike, along with positive earnings reports from major companies, bolstered investor confidence.

Fund Performance. The fund gained by 0.41% in February. Within global equities, the US and Europe were key contributors to performance. US equities continued to benefit from optimism about President Donald Trump's proposed policy initiatives for tax cuts and deregulation while European equities rose on the back of the eurozone economy expanding in 2024. All sectors generated positive returns over the month, led by financials and real estate. Within global fixed income, emerging market debt and investment grade credit delivered gains as spreads compressed. Lastly, active asset allocation was flat as gains from our long US equity position were offset by our short UK equity position.

Fund Strategy. Looking ahead, a soft landing remains as our base case but we expect recent volatility to continue into the year. We are modestly overweight to equities as we anticipate that the overall supportive economic growth environment, combined with a robust earnings outlook, will result in positive relative returns from equity markets this year. However, the bar for outperformance will be higher and valuations at the aggregate level are elevated, warranting a modest position sizing. Our position on overall duration remains neutral. We are looking for a better entry point, given current levels are not providing a compelling excess return relative to volatility. We maintain an underweight position in US rates due to expectations of stable growth, a strong labor market, and more persistent inflation in the coming months. The uncertainty surrounding Trump's policies adds to concerns about potential upside risks to US rates, reinforcing our underweight position. Additionally, we maintain a neutral stance on investment grade and high yield credit, expecting spreads to stay range-bound in 2025 with no clear catalyst for widening from current tight levels. During this volatile period, we have focused on risk management to help mitigate downside risks. Against this backdrop, income investors will be best served through a highly diversified portfolio of multi-asset income producing assets that can be dynamically adjusted as market conditions evolve.
