KEY RISKS AND RISK MANAGEMENT

You should not invest in this Fund if you do not understand or are not comfortable with the accompanying risks.

Market/Price Risk: Investors are exposed to adverse changes in the prices of foreign currency denominated fixed income collective schemes (target funds), due to a rise in interest rates as a result of adverse market conditions, unfavorable developments in the political and economic conditions of countries where the underlying securities of the target funds are issued or traded, or other issuer-specific factors.

Liquidity Risk: Investors are exposed to the risk of loss due to the inability of the target funds to convert security holdings to cash immediately or in instances where conversion to cash is possible but at a highly disadvantageous price due to limited participants in the market, low trading volumes, market disruptions, among others.

Country Risk: Investors are exposed to the risk of loss arising from negative developments in the political, economic and social conditions of the focus countries of the target fund which may adversely affect its value.

FX Risk: Investors are exposed to the risk of loss from a decline in the fund value when the market value of foreign currency denominated target funds are translated to USD.

The Fund's investment outlets undergo proper screening and evaluation in accordance with the Trustee's accreditation process. The Fund may also use financial derivatives to hedge the portfolio against market and credit risks.

OUTLOOK AND STRATEGY

Market Review. Global bonds posted modest gains in February, with the Bloomberg Global Aggregate Bond Index (Unhedged USD) returning 1.12%. Market sentiment was defined by a broad flight to safety following joint U.S. and Israeli military action against Iran late in the month. This risk-off environment funneled capital into sovereign debt, driving yields lower across major developed markets. Consequently, the U.S. Treasury curve flattened significantly, with the 10-year/2-year yield spread narrowing from 74 bps at the start of the month to 59 bps by month-end.

Credit markets remained broadly resilient despite this volatility. Investment Grade (IG) bonds generated positive total returns, even as spreads widened slightly amid the surge in demand for safe-haven assets. High Yield (HY) debt also delivered modest positive returns, though performance softened compared to January as risk appetite deteriorated in the final week. Markets remained caught between falling government bond yields, which supported carry, and widening credit spreads driven by AI-related sector concerns and heightened Middle Eastern geopolitical risk.

Investor sentiment toward Emerging Market (EM) debt turned cautious as global shocks slowed portfolio inflows. Nevertheless, the asset class delivered modest positive returns, supported by high carry and resilient macro fundamentals.

While escalating U.S.–Iran tensions triggered a late-month widening of EM hard-currency spreads, particularly for energy-importing sovereigns, the move remained contained and largely technical. Regionally, performance was varied: Latin America benefited from high carry and commodity exposure; Asia remained stable due to stronger growth and policy continuity; while EMEA showed the highest dispersion and sensitivity to the developing situation in the Middle East.

Fund Performance. The fund returned 1.09% in February, outperforming the benchmark by 8 basis points. Security selection within the fund helped improve performance.

Fund Strategy. The Fund looks to maintain a nimble portfolio position to take advantage of any opportunities as global inflation is seen to increase over the next few months as an effect of the ongoing geopolitical tensions in the Middle East. Volatility may persist in the near term driven by global factors, and the portfolio will be actively managed to take advantage of this. Investors in the bond fund must be prepared to withstand volatility as higher investment value is normally achieved over the medium to long term horizon.
