OUTLOOK AND STRATEGY

Market Review. The Bloomberg Global Aggregate Bond Index (Unhedged USD) returned 3.07% in March. Performance during the month was influenced by geopolitical developments in the Middle East, movements in energy prices and changes in central bank policy expectations, which drove market moves across both rates and credit sectors. Against this backdrop, government bond yields rose for much of March as expectations for near term interest rate cuts were pushed back. U.S. Treasuries initially weakened before recovering later in the month on early signs of easing geopolitical tensions. The U.S. 10 year Treasury yield ended the month around 4.30%, modestly higher than at the start of March. Investment grade credit held up relatively well despite higher rates, supported by strong corporate fundamentals, although returns were slightly negative. High yield bonds were more affected by market uncertainty, with wider spreads weighing on performance, even as income levels remained attractive. Emerging market bonds faced the most pressure, particularly in local currency markets, as a stronger U.S. dollar and higher oil prices led to currency weakness and investor outflows. Overall, March reflected a more cautious tone across global fixed income markets, with investors prioritizing stability amid ongoing uncertainty.

Fund Performance. Class A returned -2.56%, while Class P returned 2.62%.

Fund Strategy. The fund will continue to invest at least 90% of its assets in the target fund.
