Liquidity Risk: Investors are exposed to the risk of loss due to the target fund's inability to convert security holdings to cash immediately or in instances where conversion to cash is possible but at a highly disadvantageous price due to limited participants in the market, low trading volumes, market disruptions, among others.

OUTLOOK AND STRATEGY

Market Review. Global equities advanced in January, extending recent momentum despite elevated valuation levels and strong prior-year performance. The MSCI ACWI rose 3.0%, supported by broad participation across regions, while the Nasdaq 100 gained 1.3%. The S&P 500 experienced intra-month volatility but recovered to close just below the 7,000 level, reflecting continued resilience following outsized gains over the past several years. Sector performance was mixed, with leadership rotating toward cyclical and commodity-linked areas. Materials led gains, rising 18%, followed by Energy up 10.6%, supported by improving demand expectations. Industrials also delivered a strong start to the year, advancing 9.7%, while Communication Services and Consumer Discretionary sectors posted more moderate gains. Technology shares were broadly flat during the month, consolidating after an extended period of outperformance. Earnings expectations remain uneven across sectors, with technology- and communication-oriented industries expected to contribute disproportionately to near-term profit growth. Smaller and more domestically focused companies continue to lag, though consensus forecasts point to positive earnings growth across all sectors by 2026, suggesting a gradual broadening of the earnings cycle. Developed European equities also recorded solid gains in January. The STOXX Europe 600 rose 2.5%, supported by earnings updates and resilient macroeconomic data. Major regional benchmarks ended the month higher, reflecting improved investor confidence in the region's growth outlook. Asia-Pacific equities broadly advanced during the month. Japanese equities reached record highs mid-January, supported by currency dynamics and continued optimism around corporate reforms and technology exposure, before moderating toward month-end. South Korean equities also performed strongly, with the KOSPI reaching all-time closing highs amid sustained investor interest in export-oriented and semiconductor-related sectors.

Fund Performance. Class A returned 0.47%, while Class P returned 0.58%.

Fund Strategy. The fund will continue to invest at least 90% of its assets in the target fund.
